

I appreciate your interest in a live video session and your request for additional pictures and videos of myself. To ensure a smooth and professional collaboration, I would like to explain the importance of receiving payment upfront before providing you with more content.

I am putting myself at risk by exposing my body and everything about myself. This takes time and effort, as well as other things. Requesting payment in advance allows me to ensure that my work is appropriately compensated and that the value of my time and effort is acknowledged.

Furthermore, it demonstrates your commitment to this collaboration. By securing payment before proceeding, it ensures that we are both equally invested in this project. This commitment helps establish trust and reduces the risk of any misunderstandings or disappointments down the road.

Financial security is a fundamental concern in any business transaction. By receiving payment upfront, we can avoid any potential issues or disputes that might arise later. This clarity in payment terms provides peace of mind for both parties and contributes to a more professional and harmonious working relationship.

Finally, receiving payment upfront is a common practice in the industry, ensuring that content creators are treated fairly and with respect. It allows me to maintain control over the content I provide.

So please, I am asking for payment before delivering additional pictures and videos is a standard practice that benefits both of us. It ensures that my work is adequately compensated, demonstrates your commitment, minimizes the risk of disputes. I want to make you happy, if you also make me happy.

Best regards,
